

Dr Caron King – Biography

Dr Caron King is an NLP Master Practitioner who uses NLP in all of her facilitation and training; she is currently working towards her certification as an NLP trainer. She is a highly experienced facilitator, change specialist, licensed trainer for The Coaching Academy, and a Belbin team roles accredited trainer. She regularly facilitates for a variety of clients across the public, private and higher education sectors with clients including The Cabinet Office, The Ministry of Defense, Business Link, The British Council and several Universities.

Caron is also a highly experienced project and change manager, with a track record of delivering major change programmes in both SME and corporate organisations in the higher education, oil and gas, pharmaceutical, retail, education, transport/logistics and engineering service industries in the public and private sector. She is a change expert and organisational coach who uses her NLP and work experience to deliver practical, measurable methods of improving individual, team and business performance.

After starting her career with a scientific degree, a PhD and post-doctoral posts within academia, Caron joined the Pharmaceutical industry, working in operations management and subsequently on substantial operations-wide change programmes, business process mapping and re-engineering. She delivers personal development training to staff and University researchers for Universities in the UK and overseas, and is a Director for the national and local grad school programmes.

With a reputation for learning new skills and concepts quickly, Caron has strong interpersonal skills, is a proven motivator and achieves high standards herself and for those working with her.
