Endorsement of Researcher Development Framework

The British Library is pleased to endorse the Researcher Development Framework and welcomed the opportunity to feed into this during the drafting phase, particularly in the areas of the changing postgraduate landscape, skills development and shared solutions.

We feel that the Researcher Development Framework (RDF) will be a useful tool to help us in our continuing support for postgraduates, particularly in the areas of knowledge and intellectual abilities, research governance and organisation and personal effectiveness. We plan to use the RDF to support and inform our future services for postgraduates as we feel this is an important development towards adopting a national standard.

We look forward to continuing to work with Vitae in supporting postgraduates, building on the success of our joint Digital Researcher events and identifying further areas for collaboration in developing research skills.

Yours sincerely
