Endorsement of Researcher Development Framework

The Research Information Network is very pleased to have had the opportunity of commenting on the Researcher Development Framework during its drafting process over the past year. We have fed into this on behalf of a range of organisations, including library representative bodies, JISC, the Digital Curation Centre, UKCGE and the Higher Education Academy, who are working with us on seeking to promote information literacy in the UK academic environment.

Now that the RDF been published, we very much welcome the attention that it pays to research information and data issues, and the way that it aims to address attitudes and behaviours as well as skills. We are delighted that Vitae has taken on board our views, and that these are reflected in the document in a large range of competencies across all four domains. We feel that the RDF now provides a really good basis for promoting the relevance and importance of information literacy, and we look forward to making use of it as an awareness-raising tool. We look forward too to continuing to work with Vitae in the formulation of a research information 'lens' that can be applied to the RDF.
